To encourage graduate students to conduct academic research on campus and utilize library resources during the summer break, this initiative grants them early access to graduate-level borrowing privileges, enhancing their ability to gather and utilize academic resources effectively.

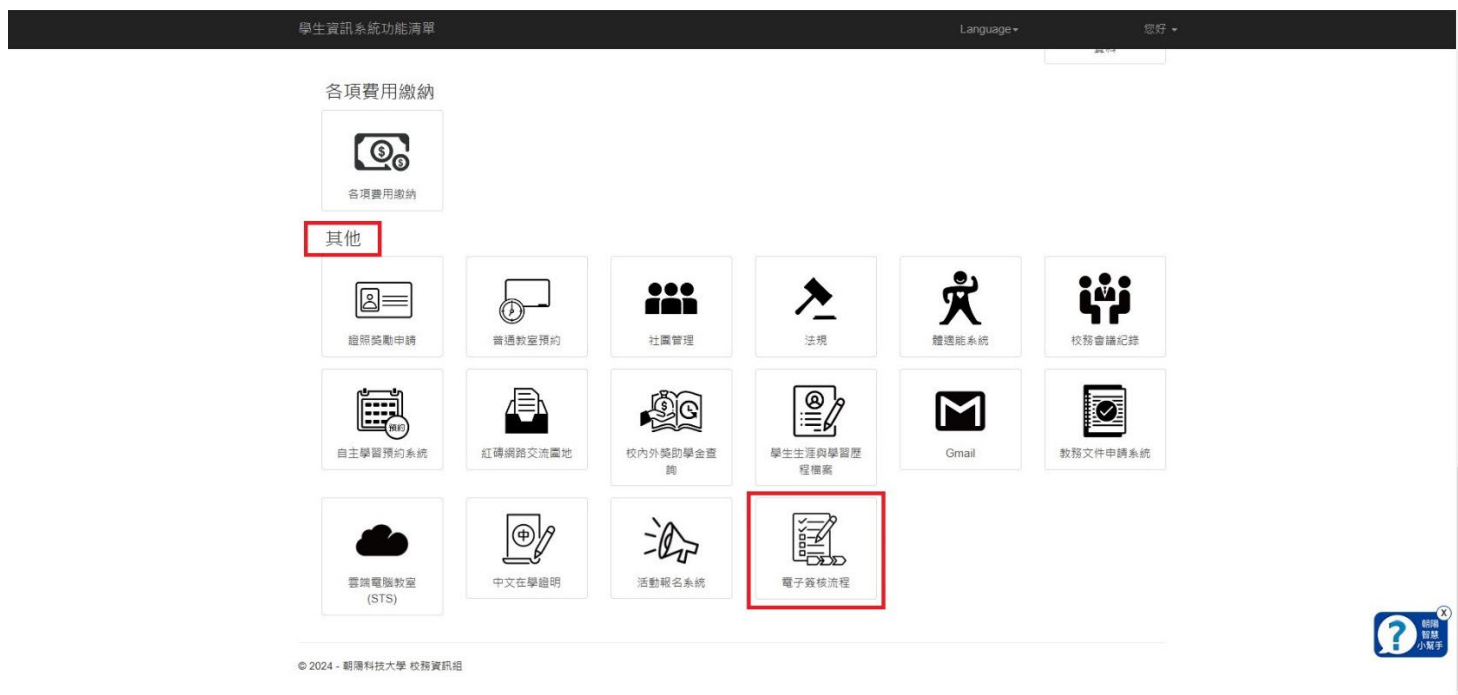

This application is open to students who have been admitted to the university's graduate programs and have completed the registration process but have not yet officially enrolled or received their student ID. These students may apply for a "Provisional Borrowing Application for Pre-Graduate Students (5-Year Integrated Bachelor-Master Program)". During the provisional borrowing period, they may continue using their undergraduate student ID and password to access library resources (including personal borrowing records and electronic resources).

At the start of the new academic year, the library will automatically transfer all borrowed items from the extension period to the new student ID. Students are advised to verify their borrowing records for accuracy once the new academic year begins.
